The Sinks of Gandy

The Sinks of Gandy are located above Whitmer, West Virginia in Randolph County. The Sinks were formed when the Gandy Creek flowed headlong against the limestone ledge of Yokum Knob. After many years it carved a 3/4 mile tunnel through the hillside. The mouth of the tunnel measures thirty feet wide by fifteen feet high. The water is an average of 10-12 inches deep and the roof of the tunnel is from 6-30 feet above the stream bed.

The Sinks of Gandy are now privately owned by the Teter family. Even though they are privately owned they still attract caving enthusiasts, geologists, and tourists alike with their rugged beauty and mysterious past.
